EUREF-DOME & ATRIUM

UPCYCLING AS ITS BEST

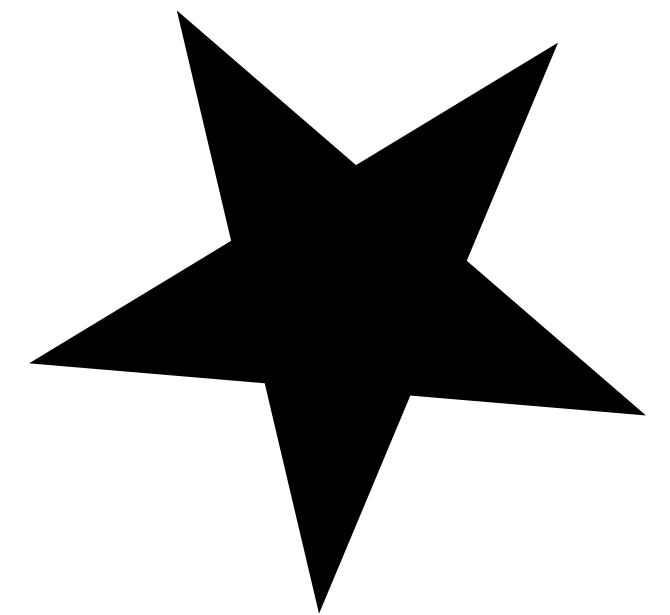

The EUREF-Dome is much more than just an event location. Originally designed for the 2006 World Cup in Berlin, it later gained nationwide fame as the impressive backdrop for Günther Jauch's talk show in the Schöneberg Gasometer. Today, it stands – newly rebuilt – on the EUREF-Campus in Düsseldorf as an iconic highlight for forward-looking events.

With an impressive height of 21 metres and its unique dome architecture, it creates a spectacular atmosphere for innovative and flexible event formats.

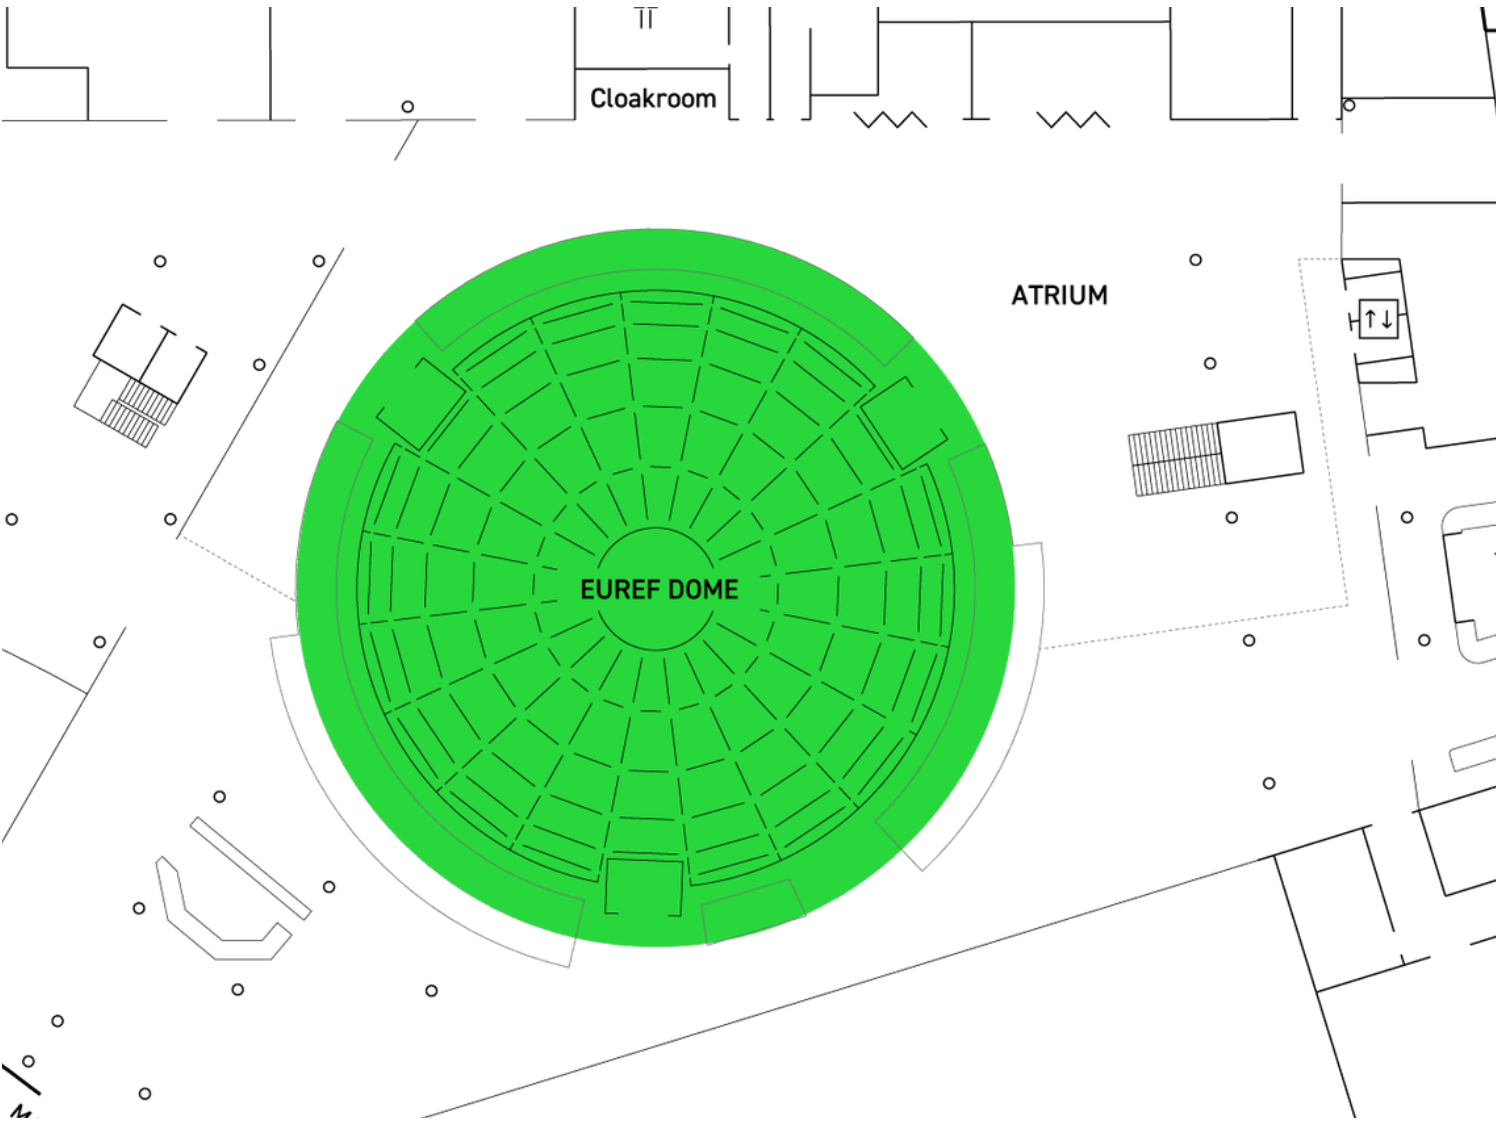

The location is complemented by the light-flooded, green atrium – an inspiring space that lends a special flair to events of all kinds and offers space for networking or exhibitions.

BENEFITS:

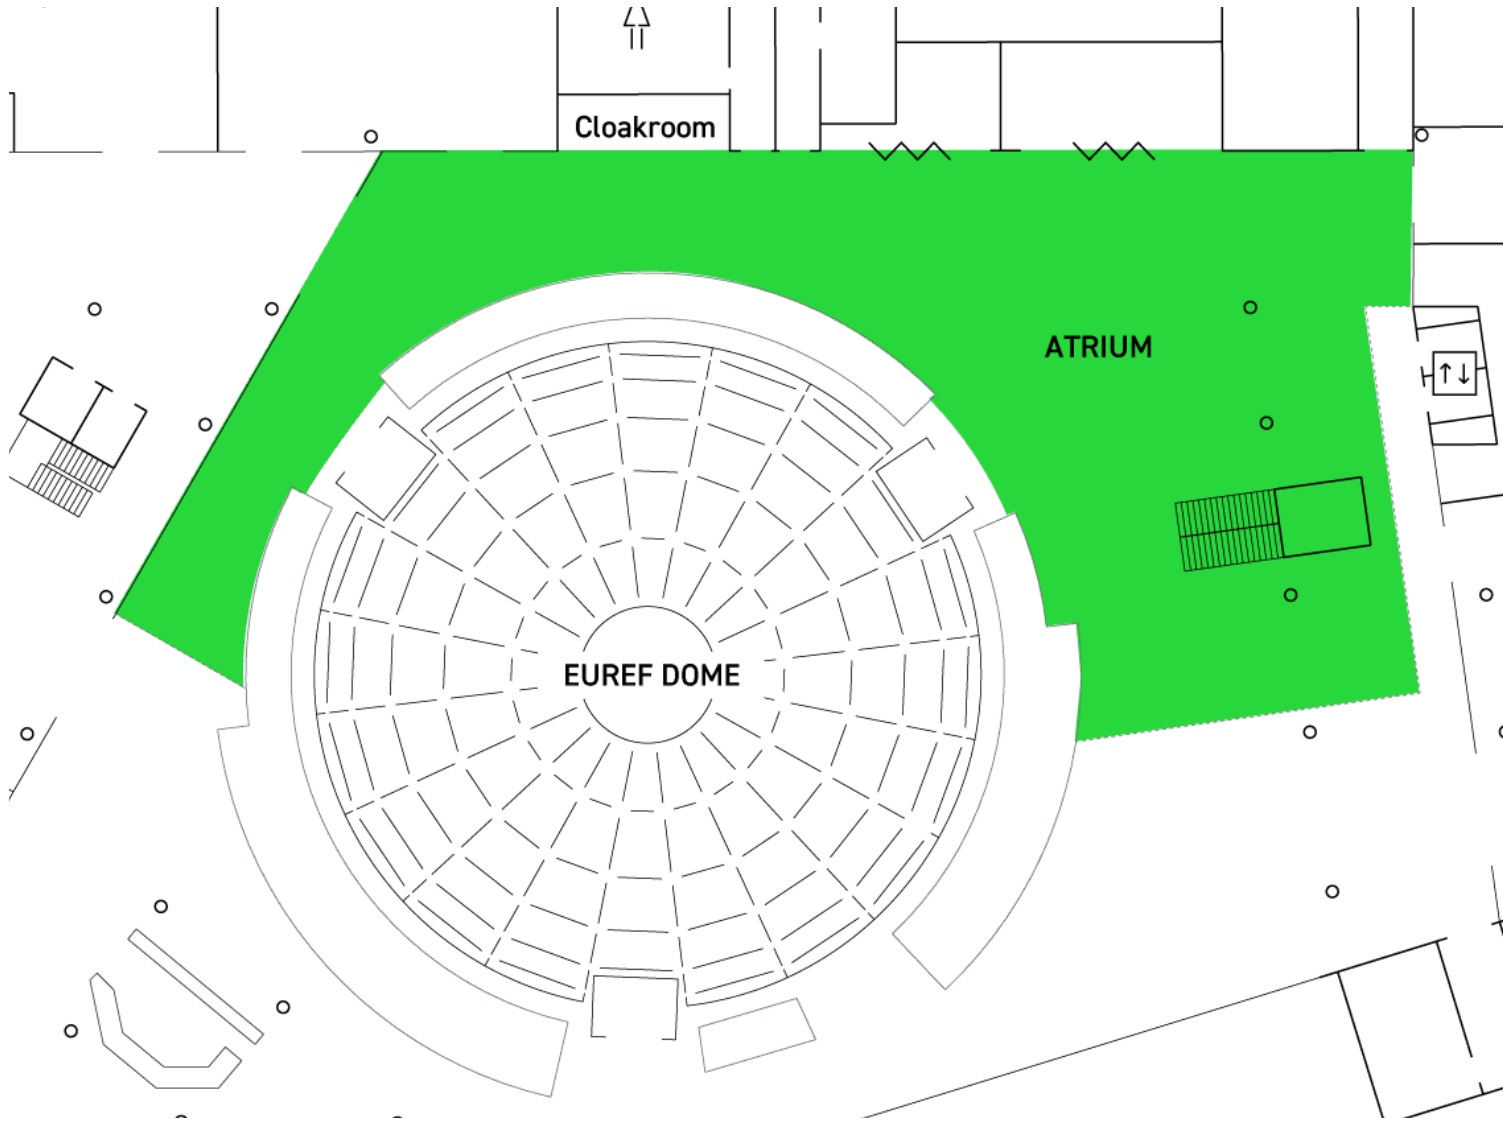

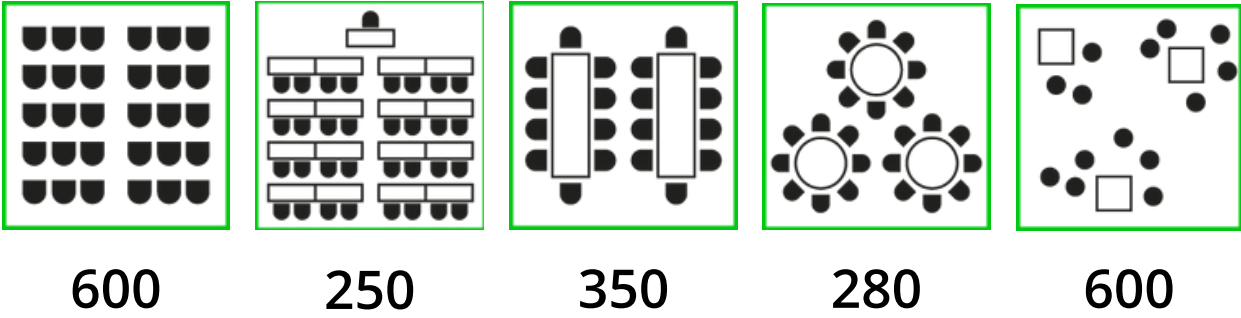

- > unique atmosphere
- > up to 21 metres ceiling height
- > daylight-flooded atrium
- > wide range of uses
